

JOHN GREGORY SMITH.

Today the remains of a more than ordinary man lie in Vermont. There is a lifeless form that seems so curious...

Let any man before he presumes to pass upon the details of a great man's life, or the means by which he accomplished a great life work, observe his immediate surroundings...

If any one should question the propriety of the lives or actions of the founders of the State he would be condemned for treason to humanity.

The primitive Green Mountain Boys had only a common foe to contend with. No one envied their work or their hardships.

When "liberty wept for the man in blue" and sighed for the man in gray," and when he stamped that period in the history of Vermont with those heroic features...

His whole life was a constant warfare. He was so bound up in his life work that he had no time for other ambitions.

It may not be said of him that he had unmet political aspirations, for he was content with the position in the gift of the State.

He was in advance of the times in which he lived in commercial progress. He was among a people elevated by their customs and habits in not only a moral but being studious in an educational point of view...

GENERAL RESULTS OF THE ELECTIONS.

Consideration of the election results with reference to future campaigns, and especially the Presidential contest, furnishes thoughtful Republicans ample ground for maintaining that the Republican party will win the next national election...

These propositions are susceptible of proof to any reasonable man. The Ohio political battle was entirely confined to national affairs. Major McKinley, as the author of the bill which bears his name and embodies in every line the theory and practice of protection, forced the tariff question to the front from the opening of the canvass...

Majority grants a Republican majority equal to her normal majority in off years. The Democrats forced the fight on local issues, and tried to fasten the Bardeley defalcation on leading Republicans.

The re-election of Governor Russell the young Democratic chief executive of Massachusetts, was due to local and personal causes. His majority is so small that some of the other candidates on the ticket with him were elected.

The Iowa contest was run, as between Republicans and Democrats, on prohibition, railroad and other issues peculiar to the State. Both parties bid for the Farmer's alliance vote.
